Top NRCA ProCertification FAQS—ANSWERED!

Q: Why should I certify my workers through NRCA?

A: NRCA ProCertification can dramatically and positively affect your company. When you invest in your workers, you show them you value their knowledge and skills and want them to have successful, long-lasting careers with your company.

Q: Is training required by NRCA or any other organization to achieve NRCA ProCertification?

A: No. If an NRCA ProCertification applicant meets the experience and skills requirements, no specific training is required.

Q: Does NRCA offer study guides to prepare and practice for the certification exam?

A: Yes. Candidates can access NRCA ProCertification tutorials, practice exams, and readiness checklists, at nrca.net/procertreadiness.

Q: What if I invest in my workers and they leave my company?

A: Your best employees already are the target of your competition. Your interest in advancing their careers builds loyalty, and employee satisfaction rises when they feel valued and know you are investing in them.

Q: Will workers be required to be NRCA ProCertified?

A: Many building owners, states, municipalities, insurance companies and other entities have indicated they will begin requiring NRCA ProCertified installers and foremen to be on job sites in the near future.

Q: Can I certify my Spanish-speaking workers?

A: Yes. All information, materials and tests are available in English and Spanish.
